about the magazine

The Linguistic and Literary Documents journal is an academic and refereed publication that consists of two main sections: the first is devoted to the study of linguistics and literature through articles and popular documents in the areas of language, literature, and communication, which it helps teachers, students and researchers to systematize knowledge of permanent interest and to keep up-to-date on new topics and problems. The second section includes literary creation material, consisting of literary texts of different genres, as well as complementary documents: reviews, essays, interviews, translations, etc.

This magazine was created in 1977 with the purpose of supporting teachers and students in their academic tasks through explanatory notes, synthesis of theories, articles and complex books, exemplification of methodologies, reproduction and translation of texts and documents that are difficult to access, and comments. topics of interest in the specialty. As of 2006, DLL transforms its printed format into an electronic version, in order to more effectively disseminate linguistics, language sciences, literature, and literary creation.
