Acknowledgements

I would particularly like to thank my supervisor Associate Professor Iain Spence for his input, his patience (with this work and its author), and for the generous gift of time during his holidays.

I would like to thank the staff and postgraduates of the School of Classics History and Religion at the University of New England, for their support, friendship and feedback whilst writing this thesis, the process was far less arduous as a result.

I make particular mention of Trish Wright-Langsford, Gina Butler, Professor David Kent, Dr. Bronwyn Hopwood, Dr. David Roberts, Dr. Rob Knowles, and Paul Brown.

I would also like to thank friends and family for their support: the entire Johns clan, Bob Estrich, Marc Mellors, Robert Ledwidge, Gerwood Stewart and Chris Matthew.

I would also like to acknowledge and thank the staff at the museums of Adamklissi, Bucharest, Cluj-Napoca, and Deva for their friendly welcome and allowing me to photograph their collections, and Dr. Geoff Adams for allowing me to use some of his photographs in the production of this work.

Finally, I would like to thank my partner Fiona Johns and my son Aidan, without your patience and support, not to mention proofreading, this thesis could not have been possible, this work is dedicated to you.
